Imputed Rate of Return for Non-Income Producing Assets

NOTE: This document repeals Program Instructions N° 2016-08

Effective Date: November 1, 2017

Summary:

Imputed rate of return for November 1, 2017 to October 31, 2018 is zero (0.00%)

Action Required:

For the period of November 1, 2017 to October 31, 2018 the interest rate for imputed income is 0.00%. Housing providers should use the rate of 0.00% per annum when calculating imputed income on non-income producing assets and transferred assets.

Background:

The imputed rate of return is used to attribute income to a non-income producing asset. Examples of non-income producing assets include investments in precious metals, assets transferred outside the household, and recreational property such as a trailer, or non-winterized cottage. Financial investments that don't earn interest or dividends, such as mutual funds, are also considered non-income producing assets.

The imputed rate of return is set annually. It is based on the newest November issue of Canada Savings Bonds series rounded down to the nearest whole percentage. Interest rates are published on the Canada Savings Bonds website, at www.csb.gc.ca. The interest rate for the most recent series of Canada Savings Bonds is 0.50% rounded down to the nearest whole percentage of 0.00%.
